

The world gymnastics community turns sight to Doha, Qatar where for the next two weeks (October 25th – November 3rd) the Doha Aspire Dome will be the host of the 48th World Championships, the first one ever to be held in the Middle East.

IG will be onsite to provide detailed coverage of the event.

Here are some important facts in regard to the event:

- The nominative roster released by FIG includes over 500 male and female gymnasts from 78 countries.
- The medal winning nations in the team finals for both men and women will earn automatic berth to the 2020 Tokyo Olympic Games (for detailed qualification procedure to the 2020 Tokyo Olympics, click here), while the top 24 nations from team qualification will advance full teams to the 2019 World Championships in Stuttgart, Germany.
- All delegations have arrived in Doha and have begun their training; in fact, the men have already completed their 10 subdivisions of podium training.
- The 11 subdivisions of the women's podium training will be held October 23rd and 24th and IG will provide detailed coverage of each one of them.
For detailed schedule of the competition check below.
- On the women's side the United States is the defending world and Olympic champion and with the return of Simone Biles, who took a year off after the Rio Olympics, is expected to easily retain its title. Biles is the overwhelming favorite to win the all-around title, and could win several additional gold medals on the individual events. Russia and China are the next strongest contenders for the podium, but will face a challenging opposition from the much-improved teams from Japan and perhaps Canada, France and Brazil.

- On the men's side Japan is the defending world and Olympic champion, but unlike the US women they will face a fierce competition primarily in the face of China and Russia.

- After the ankle injury sustained in qualifications on vault at last year's worlds, Japan's Kohei Uchimura is back.

The six-time world all-around champion and two-time defending Olympic all-around champion sustained another less severe ankle injury a few weeks ago, and with the conclusion of the team's podium training here in Doha, it appears that Uchimura will not be competing on floor and vault, and, therefore, missing the all-around.

- Both defending all-around champions from last year Morgan Hurd (United States) and Xiao Ruoteng (China) are expected to compete in the all-around with a shot at defending their titles.

- Russian star Aliya Mustafina returns to competition after giving birth to a baby girl in the summer of 2017. Mustafina is expected to compete UB and BB only.

- After a shoulder and an ankle surgery late last year Oleg Verniaiev is back to competing for Ukraine. Verniaiev didn't train on rings during podium's training; therefore, it is questionable if he will compete in the all-around or not.

- On the men's side all six defending individual event champions from last year are entered in the competition: Kenzo Shirai (Japan) FX and VT, Max Whitlock (Great Britain) PH, Eleftherios Petrounias (Greece) SR, Zou Jingyuan (China) PB and Tin Srbic
